Who will carry NPA banner?

Sullivan says being the incumbent is a double-edged sword

By JEFF HODSON
Metro Vancouver

Members of Vancouver's Non-Partisan Association decide this weekend whether Mayor Sam Sullivan or Coun. Peter Ladner will carry their party's banner into November's civic election.

The party's nomination meeting, which will determine its mayoral and half of its council, school board and park boards candidates, begins Sunday at 10 a.m. Voting closes at 4 p.m. and results are expected that night.

Sullivan, who became mayor in 2005 after defeating Vision mayoral candidate Jim Green by less than 4,000 votes, feels that the fact he is an incumbent is a double-edged sword.

"As opposed to Coun. Ladner, I've done some difficult things," Sullivan said yesterday. "We've done it together, actually, but I'm the guy who takes the hit for it — such as changing tax to supporting small businesses.

"But when things do start to show improvements, with the Canada Line being completed, the new conventions centre, upgrades … all those things … will help me."

Ladner, 59, however, believes the NPA cannot win if Sullivan is leading the party.

"I wanted to put together a winning team for the NPA," said the two-term councillor, who announced he would seek the nomination on Feb. 21.

His polling suggests that less than 13 per cent of people would pick Sullivan as their first choice for mayor.

Ladner a 'consensus' man

Mayoral hopeful says he'll stick to non-partisanship

By JEFF HODSON
Metro Vancouver

Peter Ladner says he wants to put the non-partisan back in the NPA.

« Sam tends to be very partisan, political and divisive on things ... I want to focus on solutions, not political points. »
Peter Ladner, NPA mayoral nomination candidate

"I'm more of a consensus builder than (Mayor Sam Sullivan)," said Ladner, a two-term councillor who is running for the party's mayoral nomination because he fears Sullivan can't win. The party votes Sunday.

"Sam tends to be very partisan, political and divisive on things ... I want to focus on solutions, not political points."

Ladner, 59, who is married with four children, said he wants to make Vancouver the safest, greenest, most affordable and globally competitive city in the country.

"I think on the general issues," Ladner said, "you'll find that Sam and I and the Vision candidates are very much alike. There are a lot of similar solutions that we all know are required."

Among his priorities is increased spending on mental health and addiction treatment, a national and provincial investment in social housing and a revision of federal tax laws to encourage the development of market rental housing.

Ladner is also a proponent of retrofitting buildings to make them more energy efficient and decreasing the number of single-driver cars through increased transit and a bike-sharing program, similar to one in Paris.

'I have initiated so many investments'

Sullivan wants to stay on to see projects finished

« You can't really turn the city in three years. »
Mayor Sam Sullivan

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

Vancouver's Mayor Sam Sullivan said he's initiated countless policies, programs and initiatives in the three years he's been mayor, and now wants to be around to see them come to fruition.

Sullivan spent 12 years on council before being elected mayor in 2005, a term that could come to an end if NPA Coun. Peter Ladner wins the party nomination on Sunday.

"I have initiated so many investments," Sullivan said yesterday. "I represented the city in Torino, I accepted the (Olympic) flag and I'd like to be the person to give it away."

Sullivan said there's a number of projects for which he's worked especially hard, including Project Civil City, which aims to reduce crime and homelessness, and CAST, a proposed research trial targeting people with chronic addictions.

He introduced EcoDensity to reduce the city's impact on the environment and increase housing affordability, and has lobbied for funding for a rapid transit line to the University of B.C. and 12 new social housing sites.

"I'd like to be around when we actually start to see these results, not just putting all the hard work into getting ... the projects in place."

"You can't really turn the city in three years."

Vision Vancouver holds mayor meeting June 15

Park commissioner, councillor and MLA up for nomination

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

Vision Vancouver is holding its party nomination meeting on June 15 at the Croatian Cultural Centre on Commercial Drive.

The party's mayoral candidates, Gregor Robertson, Raymond Louie and Allan De Genova, had their final debate last night.

Robertson is MLA for Vancouver-Fairview and co-founder of Happy Planet beverage company.

De Genova is a park board commissioner and Louie is a city councillor and former school trustee.

The party's platform includes a proposal for a mental health advocate and a call for tougher rental housing regulations to crack down on greedy landlords.

The party is also pushing for the elimination of plastic bags, a ban on union and corporate donations in city politics and an expansion of food options for street vendors.

Canada's Olympic team to be decided at championships

Canada's Olympic triathlon team will be decided this weekend at the 2008 BG Triathlon World Championships in Vancouver.

The Canadians could secure two more berths to compete in Beijing — two for men and two for women — if Canada finishes among the top eight countries.

Yesterday, Canadian triathlete Jay MacDonald covered his face with a thick coat of Vaseline while practicing to delay what he said is the crippling numbness caused by the frigid waters of English Bay.

He's competing in Sunday's elite race, which also pits B.C.'s Simon Whitfield against Spain's Javier Gomez. Whitfield, who won gold at the 2000 Sydney Games, finished behind Gomez in last year's world rankings, according to CBC News.

On the women's side, Carolyn Murray, Kathy Tremblay and Victoria's Kirsten Sweetland are the top Canadians.

Sunday's elite races are preceded by junior events that took place yesterday.

Glasgow's Kirsty McWilliam won the junior women's world championship. She told runnersweb.com that "it was freezing" yesterday morning but that being from Scotland, she's used to it.

Vincent Luis, of France, won the junior men's championship.

British Columbia tops other provinces when it comes to breast cancer treatment, a report released yesterday said.

B.C.'s short wait times as well as high drug availability and affordability is consistent with other studies that indicate the province has the lowest cancer mortality in the country, according to the 2008 Breast Cancer Wait Times in Canada Report Card.

"There's a lot of anxiety in breast cancer and women really feel that something should be done immediately," said Janis Murray, the B.C. board member on CBCN and a breast cancer survivor.

"The report is a call to action," she said.

Port Coquitlam Mayor Scott Young was depressed, off his medication and was extremely intoxicated when he barged into his ex-girlfriend's converted-garage gym and assaulted her and her friend, his lawyer said yesterday.

Last month, Young pleaded guilty to two counts of assault and one count of breaching a court order to stay away from Colleen Preston.

In his pockets were two four-metre lengths of rope, similar to the one his teenage daughter used to hang herself in 2002.

At his sentencing yesterday, defence lawyer Richard Peck described Young as a caring parent who had devoted two decades of his life to public service and who suffers from depression and alcoholism.

Preston and Young met and started dating in 2006. They vacationed together in Hawaii and even got matching tattoos depicting a runner and a sun.

With the end of the relationship in February 2007, Young began to suffer deep depression, anxiety and angst.

In the week before the assault, he stopped taking his anti-depressants and began to drink.

On April 4, before the assault, Young drank four or five glasses of wine, and while staring at a photo of his deceased daughter became grossly intoxicated, Peck said.

Young attended a seven-week alcohol treatment program in the Sunshine Coast and attends weekly Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

Crown and defence are asking for a conditional sentence of nine months to be served in the community, followed by a probation period of between six and 16 months. Young will be sentenced next month.

A giant piece of history sailed into Richmond yesterday.

The Nina, a to-scale wooden replica of the ship Christopher Columbus came to the Americas aboard, and its crew of six is making a four-day stop here on its journey around the continent.

The 20-metre-long floating museum was built in Brazil using the same building techniques and tools as the original, to commemorate the 500th anniversary of Columbus discovering America.

tours

» The ship is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Britannia Shipyard National Historic Site.

The Nina's captain, Kyle Friauf, said despite making four trans-Atlantic journeys in the 15th century, it would likely never have made it to British Columbia.

"I doubt if (it) would have been capable of coming up the West Coast this far because the prevailing winds and seas are against us," he said. "We have the advantage of a diesel engine."

He said the ship is a great way to see what life was like 500 years ago.

"This is an entirely wooden ship, kind of a rarity these days. The rigging, the sail plan and all that is identical (to the original)."

Chinese youth feel typecast: Report

By KRISTEN THOMPSON

Chinese-Canadian youth who have run-ins with the law often say discrimination, alienation, family and culture, and lack of support led them down that path.

These are the findings of a report, Chinese Canadian Youth In The Criminal Justice System Of Canada, released yesterday, which looked at the experiences of 44 youth in Vancouver and Toronto.

Participants said they felt typecast as Asian gang members and that counsellors didn't understand their upbringing, said the head of the study, Siu-ming Kwok, in Chinatown yesterday.

Kwok said there's a need for Chinese hotlines, and counsellors need to be more aware of their challenges.

Grits to fight 'unborn' bill

Tory MP says Dion 'fear-mongering'

CHRIS WATTIE/REUTERS

Liberal leader Stéphane Dion announced yesterday that his party will oppose the so-called Unborn Victims of Crime Act.

Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Rona Ambrose, one of the most socially progressive members of Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government, is throwing her support behind a private member's bid to legally recognize the rights of the unborn.

"Our government has no interest, no intention of reopening the abortion debate. That debate is over. It was over a long time ago, but there is an issue of protecting pregnant women who choose to have a baby," Ambrose said.

Ambrose decided to weigh into the debate yesterday after she heard Liberal Leader Stéphane Dion vow his party would do all it could to block the so-called Unborn Victims of Crime Act, or C-484.

"I want to give my word to all the women of Canada that the Liberal Party of Canada is against (reopening) women's right to decide ... We are against that and we will not allow that to happen," Dion said.

"This is not a crime bill and this is a way to reopen the debate we don't want to reopen."

Ambrose said it's Dion who's turning it into an abortion debate.

DO YOU NEED A DETOX?

	YES	NO
Are you often tired?	■	■
Do you get headaches frequently?	■	■
Do you have a hard time losing weight?	■	■
Are you bloated or retaining water?	■	■
Mental cloudiness?	■	■
Is your skin getting bad?	■	■

These symptoms above are some of the most common signs of toxic overload, and detoxing once or twice a year is often recommended as a solution. In a recent study of 116 women in the UK, 70% were satisfied or very satisfied with the results from their Biofirm detox.

I unjunked my body!

Lina works in the fitness industry in Ottawa and recently came across an article on detoxing. Here is her story;

"I was having a hard time losing those stubborn extra pounds and I was tired a lot, which showed in my face. So when I came across a Biofirm story in the local newspaper, it made me curious.

It definitely made sense to me that we get tired and bloated from too many toxins in our foods and from our environment. But I didn't know that it made us gain weight! So I purchased a box of Biofirm and took the recommended 6 tablets a day for a month with lots of water and high-fibre foods. I was determined to unjunk my body!"

I lost 11 pounds on the detox!

"In the first 4 weeks I lost 7 pounds. I definitely felt lighter and my skin was looking great – I was glowing! I had read that it could be unpleasant to take Biofirm but I actually enjoyed it, especially because you are still able to do your daily duties. You don't have to stay home or do it on the weekends.

After the 30 days detox, I wanted to continue, so I bought another 14 days of tablets. Again, I lost another 4 pounds and my clothes were getting very loose! I was thrilled - and the great part is that I didn't have to exercise vigorously for 6 weeks!!"

DETOXING: A GREAT WAY TO START A HEALTHIER LIFE

Everyday, our bodies are exposed to toxins from the air we breathe, the water we drink and especially the processed foods we eat. If our bodies get overburden with toxins, our liver suffers and we start seeing the effect on our health; Our skin is affected, we get tired, we retain water, get headaches, digestion problems, bad breath and find it especially hard to lose weight.

Researchers have now discovered the biological cause of those stubborn pounds; Toxic particles bind water in the bodies' soft tissue and inhibit your metabolism from burning fat efficiently. The Conclusion: To lose weight, you must first cleanse your body!

Train wheel warning

Safety inspectors say recalled parts still being used shortfall

» The TSB warned that "shortfall" in the recall process meant some 25 per cent of the faulty wheels sets are still rolling down North America's tracks.

Canadian safety inspectors warned North America's railroads yesterday to find up to 12,000 freight car wheel sets that remain in use, despite having been recalled years ago for safety problems.

The wheel sets, made by Canadian National Railway between 1998 and 2001, have been blamed for at least 15 derailments in Canada and an unknown number of accidents in the United States, according to the Transportation Safety Board of Canada.

Twelve of the Canadian derailments occurred after Canadian National discovered the problem, and the Association of American Railroads (AAR) alerted other carriers that the defective wheel sets should be taken out of service.

Yesterday's TSB warning stems from an investigation into a 2006 derailment of a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train in Buckskin, Ont., that was caused by a broken CN-built wheel set on a CP freight car.

A spokesman for the AAR said he could not comment on the TSB's report because he was not familiar with the case.

Aviation safety questioned

Canada's aviation system is the safest in the world, federal regulators say, fending off critics who charge that funding cutbacks are forcing Transport Canada to implement a new method of oversight that is untested.

Growing levels of air traffic and a shortage of civil aviation inspectors have left little choice but to introduce a controversial program giving aviation firms greater responsibility to police the safety of their own operations, said NDP MP Peter Julian. Transport Canada officials acknowledged ongoing staffing challenges, saying they're short 134 civil aviation inspectors.

9/11 suspect welcomes death

JANET HAMLIN/REUTERS

A courtroom sketch shows Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, right, and Waleed bin Attash, two suspected conspirators in the Sept. 11 attacks, as they attend a court hearing inside a U.S. military war crimes court at Guantanamo Bay yesterday.

Alleged planner of attacks in Gitmo military court

The accused al Qaeda mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks stood in a U.S. military court yesterday, sang a chant of praise to Allah and said he would welcome the death penalty.

"This is what I wish, to be martyred," Pakistani captive Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the highest-ranking al Qaeda operative in U.S. custody, told the Guantanamo war crimes court. He and four accused co-conspirators appeared in court at the Guantanamo Bay U.S. naval base in Cuba for the first time on charges that could result in their execution.

As the judge questioned him about whether he was satisfied with the U.S. military lawyer appointed to defend him, Mohammed stood and began to sing in Arabic, cheerfully pausing to translate his own words into English.

"My shield is Allah most high," he said, adding that his religion forbade him from accepting a lawyer from the U.S. and that he wanted to act as his own attorney.

He criticized the U.S. for fighting in Afghanistan and Iraq, waging what he called "a crusader war," and enacting illegal laws, including those authorizing same-sex marriages. REUTERS

co-defendants

Clinton backing off?

Senator distancing herself from push to become VP

Hillary Clinton distanced herself yesterday from a push to convince former Democratic rival Barack Obama to choose her as his running mate and said the decision on a vice-president was his alone to make.

As Obama enjoyed his first campaign swing as the likely Democratic presidential nominee, some prominent supporters of Clinton have launched an effort to pressure him to invite her to join his ticket as the No. 2 in the general election battle against Republican John McCain.

U.S. media reported that Obama and Clinton were meeting yesterday night at Clinton's home in Washington. There were no details on what they were discussing.

Critics of Clinton have accused her of trying to force her way on to the ticket. An aide to the New York senator issued a statement trying to dispel that impression. Backers of an Obama-Clinton ticket believe it would be the best way to unify the Democratic Party after the hard-fought race between the candidates. REUTERS

HIV rates drop in South Africa

Infection incidence down among pregnant women

The prevalence of HIV among pregnant women in South Africa fell for the second time in two years last year as a result of intensive prevention campaigns, the health minister said yesterday.

Presenting the health department's budget to parliament, Manto Tshabalala-Msimang said the decline, shown by an annual survey, pointed to a drop in infection among the population at large.

The latest survey showed the incidence among women who visited antenatal clinics fell to 28 per cent last year from an estimated 29.2 per cent in 2006.

Prevalence in the 15-19 age group fell to 12.9 per cent in 2007 from 13.7 per cent in 2006, and in the 25-29 age group, to 37.9 per cent in 2007 from 38.7 per cent in 2006.

"Taken together, these figures do indeed suggest that we have a trend of decreasing prevalence overall and in the younger age cohort and this trend is in line with the predictions of the UNAIDS Spectrum model," Tshabalala-Msimang said.

The government has been widely criticised for being slow to stem the spread of HIV/AIDS and Tshabalala-Msimang has provoked worldwide outrage for emphasising traditional remedies in the fight against the disease. REUTERS

STUDY Researchers who tracked 100,000 people using their cell phone signals confirmed on Wednesday that most human beings are indeed creatures of habit.

Sudan accused of war crimes

Criminal court prosecutor says he will seek indictments

The International Criminal Court prosecutor said yesterday he would seek new indictments next month against top officials, accusing Sudan's "entire state apparatus" of involvement in crimes in Darfur.

Prosecutor Luis Moreno Ocampo's address to the UN Security Council coincided with a visit by envoys to Darfur, scene of one of the world's worst humanitarian crises.

Khartoum has accused Moreno Ocampo of wrecking prospects for peace in Darfur, and Sudan's President Omar Hassan al-Bashir told a visiting UN Security Council delegation that certain groups were exploiting the crisis for their own ends.

Judges at the ICC, set up in 2002 in The Hague as the world's first permanent court to try individuals for war crimes, issued arrest warrants for two Sudanese suspects in April last year, but Khartoum has refused to hand them over. REUTERS

Seratonin helps regulate emotions

STUDY Serotonin, the brain chemical linked to mood, plays a key role in regulating emotions such as aggression, British researchers said yesterday. Serotonin, the nerve-signalling chemical targeted by many antidepressants, appears to keep aggressive social responses in check, Molly Crockett, a psychologist at the University of Cambridge and colleagues reported in the journal Science.

The chemical's precise role in impulse control has been controversial but this study is one of the first to actually show a causal link, Crockett said. REUTERS

Oilsands output to nearly triple

Production from Alberta's oil sands climbed to 1.32 million barrels a day last year, a 5 per cent rise over 2006 and could get to 3.2 million per day by 2017, the province's energy regulator said yesterday.

In its annual reserves and supply-demand report, Alberta's Energy Resources Conservation Board said the province's output of tar-like bitumen rose to a total 482 million barrels in 2007 and could rise above one billion barrels within nine years.

Production from the oil sands is ramping up to meet demand from U.S. refiners, with more than $100 billion in projects under construction or on the drawing board. The report said that the total amount of bitumen in the province is 1.7 trillion barrels. REUTERS

Kearl permit today?

Derailed oil sands project may be back on track

on stream

» Kearl was expected to begin producing by 2011, but Imperial had warned the court-imposed halt could delay the project.

A key water-use permit allowing construction of Imperial Oil's $8 billion Kearl oil sands project in northern Alberta could be reissued as soon as today, a spokesman for the company said.

The project was derailed in March after environmental groups challenged its approval.

The 300,000 barrels a day Kearl development is one of about $100 billion in projects on the books or under construction to exploit the oil sands deposits of northern Alberta, which contain the largest oil reserves outside the Middle East.

The federal government quietly approved a revised environmental assessment report for the project on May 15, one day after Imperial lost its appeal, a decision that has raised the ire of environmental groups. REUTERS

Plagiarism costs Pratt his job

By JOYCE YIP
for Metro Vancouver

A Vancouver sports columnist at The Province was fired yesterday for plagiarism.

The decision was made when a reader noticed phrases in David Pratt's article about Bob Cole on Tuesday were almost identical to a September 2000 Sports Illustrated article by basketball commentator, Rick Riley.

In a CBC phone interview, Pratt explained that he wanted to leave the office before noon on Saturday. He called it a "minor gaffe" and claimed to have repeatedly apologized in the last 24 hours.

Pratt will continue to host his talk show on Team 1040, a Vancouver sports radio station.

Celtics snag lead

Boston draws first blood in finals

CELTICS 98 LAKERS 88

MIKE SEGAR/REUTERS

Boston Celtics' Paul Pierce, left, and Kevin Garnett, right, help shut down the Los Angeles Lakers' Kobe Bryant, as the Celtics beat the Lakers 98-88 last night in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

Carried off the court with a sprained right knee in the third quarter, Paul Pierce became the inspirational leader down the stretch as the Celtics beat the Los Angeles Lakers, 98-88 last night, in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

Pierce left the game with under seven minutes remaining in the third after colliding with teammate Kendrick Perkins, but incredibly returned and had 19 of his 22 points in the final two quarters. That included back-to-back three- pointers that gave Boston the lead for good late in the third.

Kevin Garnett totaled 24 points and 13 rebounds, while Ray Allen added 19 points and eight rebounds in the win. In the first Finals game for Boston's big three of Garnett, Pierce and Allen, the trio combined to shoot 21-of-45, carrying the offensive load in Boston's first NBA Finals game since 1987.

Rajon Rondo had 15 points and seven assists. Perkins, who left with 6:19 remaining in the third, didn't return due to an ankle injury.

Kobe Bryant, going after his fourth championship ring, had 24 points to pace the Lakers, who are in the their first NBA Finals since falling to Detroit in 2004.

Derek Fisher and Pau Gasol both had 15 points for Los Angeles

Cup winners come in a various forms

TOUL BOX
SCOTT RINTOUL
scott.rintoul@metronews.ca

The Red Wings' Stanley Cup win reinforces what I and many others have been saying since the Salary Cap Era began: there is no one way to win a championship.

The three years following the lockout have produced three champions that went about their business in entirely different manners.

Carolina won a Cup with a team that was chock full of offence, relatively thin on defence and backstopped by an unproven youngster. Anaheim was the polar opposite in 2007; the Ducks were built around two Norris Trophy winners, a goaltender with a Conn Smythe already on his resume, enough scoring to compliment that exceptional back end, and the toughest team in the league.

This year's Wings provided even more contrast. Detroit boasts sublime skill up front with the likes of Henrik Zetterberg and Pavel Datsyuk, but is also the most defensively sound team in the league with a blue-line that features Nicklas Lidstrom, one of the greatest defencemen in NHL history.

In this copycat era of professional sports, the recent trend in hockey suggests there is no reason to emulate one particular team. Yes, you will always need the necessary ingredients of grit, clutch scoring, good goaltending, etc.

The difference now is that you don't have to sink your money into a specific era in order to win the NHL's top prize. You can win with high-priced forwards, multi-million dollar defencemen or a big ticket goaltender. But the important point here is that you can win without any of those as well.

» The weather has certainly compromised the ability of some Lions' hopefuls to strut their stuff at training camp this week, and perhaps no group has been affected more than the receiving corps.

Though Geroy Simon, Jason Clermont and Paris Jackson are entrenched in their respective positions, the Leos are looking for someone to take hold of the fourth and fifth receiver spots. Sophomore Cory Rogers is the frontrunner, but fellow import Roosevelt Kiser is turning heads out in Abbotsford. Also drawing rave reviews early in camp, Canadian slotback Adam Nicolson.

Injury turned into fundraising society

WEST COAST OUTDOORS
DAVE NORONA
WWW.NORONALIFE.COM

It was 10 years ago when my good friend Brian Bell crashed his mountain bike on the North Shore while riding to a friend's barbecue. Brian was a great rider, was wearing a helmet and was not on a technical mountain bike trail. When he landed on his head and heard a loud pop, he knew something was very wrong.

After Brian's injury there was a dark period of four years that most people in his position go through. However, on the other side has emerged a person with a positive outlook on life that he gets to share with his amazing wife and their incredible kids. His new outlook on life created more than $60,000 dollars in a few years, which enabled him to turn North Vancouver's William Griffin gym and pool into a fully wheelchair accessible gym — the first of its kind on the shore!

Recently Brian and recreational therapist Jordan Kerton have created The Integrated Fitness Society, which is fundraising and creating opportunities for other disabled people to get out and enjoy the great outdoors. (interfit.ca.)

This Sunday you can help create awareness and raise money at the Scotiabank Rick Hansen Wheels in Motion Events happening all over the Lower Mainland. I will be at the event in Park Royal with my Norona Life team participating in the all the events. I hope to see you there. (wheelsinmotion.org.)

Dave has travelled the world to challenge some of its toughest races. He has raced in over 400 events throughout his career, and hopes his passion will excite you to get involved in your own wild adventures. Visit www.noronalife.com for more info.

Crystal Castles tear it up

Record-store riots, after-parties shut down by police helicopters and copyright woes are just some of the incidents surrounding Crystal Castles.

But given the group's noncommittal public persona, all this drama seems to just enhance their mystique.

ON THE BEAT
ROB McMAHON
rob.mcmahon@metronews.ca

Reached by e-mail, producer Ethan Kath (or not, given that friends have conducted interviews on his behalf) explained the band's position in a recent controversy over plagiarism from the Chiptune community, an online group of not-for-profit music producers who create and share songs created from samples of old video game tunes.

Last month Crystal Castles was accused of sampling a song by Belgian producer Lo-bat without securing proper copyright. Kath claims that in 2004, all of Crystal Castles' tracks were based on samples from artists like Madonna, Joy Division, and Chiptune, but by 2005 they were using their own sounds.

"(The songs in question) are the earliest, most obscure, never performed, worst songs by CC," writes Kath. "Lo-bat ... has contacted the band's management to apologize for the controversy saying he thinks it's ridiculous, this has nothing to do with him, it's clear that the band has never profited from these samples. These ancient songs have nothing to do with the band's current success."

Driving that success — which is presently in buzz mode — is the duo's album itself. One way to view their snarling electro punk is through contrasts. More overtly aggressive, chaotic tracks like Alice Practice can be interpreted as balancing comparatively mellow, rhythmic ones like Untrust Us. While the songs on the album are placed in chronological order, the compositions themselves seem to cover a pretty wide range of emotional dynamics — though Kath disagrees.

"This is all subjective. You hear contrasts. I hear the same hostility in every song," he writes. "(With) Alice Practice I hear an early experiment which switches back and forth between melody and grating noise ... (In Untrust Us) I simply hear sadness and agitation."

Crystal Castles return to Richard's on Richards tonight

That sadness, however, should not be mistaken for nostalgia. Asked if the melancholic electro of Boards of Canada is an influence for tracks like Magic Spells, Kath said he hadn't heard the group. And as for Castles' choice of '80s video game noises and sad synth moans being in any way nostalgic, Kath says no way.

"We care not for nostalgia," he writes. "If we are making anyone feel nostalgic we will change our sound."

CD REVIEWS
music@metronews.ca

Martha Wainwright

Album: I Know You're Married But I've Got Feelings Too
Label: MapleMusic/Universal
Release Date: June 3

MONTREAL'S MARTHA WAINWRIGHT is no stranger to fans of her famous brother, Rufus —she sang backup for him for years — but the rest of Canada hasn't yet embraced the engaging singer-songwriter. That is, until now. Her sophomore album is easily one of the better discs to hit stores this year. It's emotional, passionate, catchy and complex, and blows her debut record out of the water. Standout tracks include the folky acoustic number Bleeding All Over Me and the Broadway musical-ish Tower Song.

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI

Aimee Mann

Album: @#%&*! Smilers
Label: Burgundy/Sony BMG
Release Date: June 3

TWO THINGS YOU can generally rely on as far as this L.A. singer-songwriter vet is concerned: Quality writing and tuneful arrangements. Mann replaces her previous bitter bantering and conceptual works with straightforward, melancholy-laden character sketches about insecurity (the semi-autobiographical Thirty One Today), troubled personalities (Medicine Wheel, Little Tornados), addictions (Columbus Ave., Freeway) and loves lost (Phoenix).

IAN NATHANSON

Weezer

Album: The Red Album
Label: DGC/Interscope/Universal
Release Date: June 3

RIVERS CUOMO AND company remain relevant by taking geeky pokes at sacred cows like teen rebellion (Troublemaker) and Timbaland (Pork and Beans). Even the Red Hot Chili Peppers and The Rolling Stones get a few shots in Everybody Get Dangerous. Parts of this self-titled album (forever to be known as the red one) are hilarious. Others are deeply touching, like Cuomo's unabashed admission that Gordon Lightfoot, Michael Jackson and (gag) Debbie Gibson wrote some of his "Heartsongs."

GRAHAM ROCKINGHAM

The Ting Tings

Album: We Started Nothing
Label: Columbia/Sony BMG
Release Date: June 3

IF THERE'S A SUREFIRE way to make money in today's iTunes age, it's by writing an entire album of singles. That's exactly what new U.K. buzz band The Ting Tings have done — their new disc boasts 10 wildly infectious tunes that could all wind up topping charts. The record is perfect for single-song downloaders, but it's too over the top for those who covet full records. The duo's high energy and repetitive shouts are fun, but hard to stomach after a few spins.

Album leaks fuel paranoia

THE MUSIC GEEK
ALAN CROSS
alan@ongoinghistory.com

Beck is paranoid. I know this because I'm jammed into the middle seat, one row from the toilets, on a wretched American airliner heading to Los Angeles.

Adding to my hell is the tubby Midwestern seatmate who won't stop talking about how excited he is to be visiting the back lot at Universal Studios. I consider telling him about the fire, but after about 20 minutes of him burbling about Back To The Future, I figure he deserves the surprise.

Beck's paranoia surrounds the release of his new album, tentatively titled Modern Guilt. With CD sales on a supersonic vector downwards, timing the appearance of a new album has never been more critical. It must not — cannot — appear online before it gets a chance to be shipped to stores. Nothing ruins careful marketing plans like an album leak. And when marketing plans are derailed, sales crater.

Take Weezer's Red Album, which came out this past Tuesday. It wasn't supposed to be released until June 24th. But sometime on May 7 — the day after the band finished pre-release interviews with journalists (including me) — it showed up on a variety of torrent sites, forcing the band, their management and their label into some serious damage control. No one knows who leaked it online, but given how careful the Weezer people were with the demo disc, it had to be some kind of weird inside job. We'll see what happens with first-week sales when the numbers are released on Wednesday.

Beck is being so careful about his new album that Alan had to fly to Los Angeles for a listening session.

A few days later, I heard the new Coldplay album, Viva la Vida, at a private listening room set up by their label, EMI. After my cellphone was confiscated, a burly dude in a security uniform wanded me as if I might have C4 wrapped in tinfoil around my chest. I almost expected him to X-ray my shoes. Would someone go to a listening session wearing a wire? Maybe. That's how paranoid EMI is about new Coldplay music going over the wall.

Beck is being even more careful. The only listening session will be held in the L.A. offices of his manager, John Silva — hence my current air travel hell. Knowing John — whose other clients include the Foo Fighters and Jimmy Eat World — security will be super-tight. I wouldn't be surprised if I'm fingerprinted and asked for a DNA sample. Or maybe I'm just paranoid.

Resolutions for a green year

A simple way to go green is to stop buying books — borrow them from the public library instead.

Make a difference with lifestyle changes

By MARTY YORK
for Metro Vancouver

It's all so simple, really, this concept of going green. The objective is to live happy, healthy lives and save the planet.

By now, we're all familiar with what we need to do in general.

Reduce, reuse, recycle. Buy less. Burn less oil. Pollute less. Eat better. Plan better. Think better.

And so on and so on.

But what can we do specifically to go green throughout the year and help achieve our objectives?

Below are some suggestions from environmental experts:

DRIVE LESS: Walk or bike whenever possible. Take public transit. Carpool. And, if you absolutely must drive, use an energy-efficient vehicle or convert to alternative fuels like ethanol or biodiesel.

USE ENERGY-EFFICIENT APPLIANCES: You should also only run your dishwasher when it's fully loaded. And don't forget energy-efficient lightbulbs.

TAKE SHORTER SHOWERS: Or baths. Use less hot water.

USE LESS PAPER: The third largest industrial emitter of global warming pollution is the pulp and paper industry. Use paper made from post-consumer waste, and, of course, recycle your newspapers.

One way to go green is to walk — or bike, or take public transit — to work.

RID YOURSELF OF JUNK MAIL: Tell whoever's mailing you this stuff to stop and to not sell, exchange or give your information to other commercial interests.

REDUCE PRINTER USAGE: Don't toss old faxes, reports and letters. Put them in your printer face up and print on their blank side.

CLOSE YOUR DOORS: This will reduce the need to turn up the heat or air conditioning. Don't set your thermostat too high when it's cold or too low when it's warm.

BAG LESS: Don't use specially bought plastic bags. Line your kitchen garbage container with newspaper. (Not Metro, hehe.) When you shop, bring your own tote bag and reject plastic bags stores offer.

USE THE SUN: Go back to clotheslines to dry your clothes instead of those gas-guzzling and electric dryers.

TURN OFF COMPUTERS: And pull chargers out of the wall when not using them. Maximize your CPU settings, like the sleep mode, to reduce energy use.

USE THE PUBLIC LIBRARY: Stop buying so many books.

SAY NO TO STYROFOAM: If it's sold in Styrofoam, just don't buy it. Styrofoam isn't recycled; it never biodegrades.

Collect and use your rainwater for your lawn and plants.

water-saving tips

» Collect and use your rainwater for your lawn and plants. It's free and better for your plants.
» Avoid cleaners containing phosphates. When they get into rivers and lakes they cause algae blooms, robbing the water of oxygen and ultimately killing aquatic life.
» Fix that leaking hose and dripping nozzle. It will help keep your shoes and shirt dry and save water.
» Keep the septic system working smoothly! Pour 250 ml baking soda down any toilet or drain once a week. Baking soda creates a favourable pH environment for optimal bacterial action.

Litter 'everywhere': Ocean Net founder

By JON TATTRIE
for Metro Vancouver

Robert O'Brien, founder of Ocean Net.

Sailing home to Newfoundland after 35 years in Toronto, Robert O'Brien was struck by the beauty of the coastal landscape — and the filthy mess wrapped round it like a noose.

It was 1997, and O'Brien was sailing in a flotilla to commemorate the 500th anniversary of John Cabot's arrival in North America, but what he was seeing was a shocking display of what has happened to the waters since then.

"It's everywhere, ocean litter. It's frightening," the self-made businessman says, adding that most of it comes off boats — about 80 per cent from fishing boats.

He was disgusted — and inspired to found Ocean Net, a grassroots organization dedicated to cleaning up coastlines through volunteer work. Today, it boasts more than 25,000 members in 2,000 communities across Newfoundland who take to the shore at least once a year, garbage bags in hand.

"Sometimes we do it twice a year, with all the litter coming off the ocean. You wonder where it comes from. Where did that mattress come from?" he muses about one particularly strange find. "It was a single mattress. Maybe someone had it on a boat.

"Someone has to take stewardship of the environment," he explains. "You're only one person, but you know, even if you recycled or composted, you reduce your human footprint. If we all did that, we could reduce our footprint by 75 per cent."

He quotes his friend and fellow Canadian Environment Award honoree Jon Lien: "God help me if something happened to the environment while I was on watch."

O'Brien, honoured with a Hometown Hero environmental award last year, points to Ocean Net Day as a proud achievement. Held in Newfoundland the third Friday of September, it focuses attention on beaches — and the perennial need to clean them.

"It's exciting to be recognized," he says of the Canadian Environment Award. "It's exhausting, doing this. When you receive any kind of recognition or a pat on the back, you say, 'Well, it's not in vain. There is a God out there!'"

"Our strength is our people," says Mary Coxworthy, Ocean Net's executive director. "People here have pride in their local beaches, and all we have to do is steer them in the right direction. We're making everyone a steward for the shorelines of Newfoundland and Labrador."

Coral reefs, helping climate focus of this year's Ocean's Day

First proposed by Canada at the 1992 UN Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, in many countries Ocean's Day — which is on Sunday — is essentially an annual beach-cleaning fest. This year, the theme is "Helping our climate/helping our ocean" with extra attention paid to the impact on coral reefs as it coincides with the UN-sponsored International Year of the Reef. Canada's Department of Fisheries and Oceans has an activities poster to help coastal Canadians take some grassroots action (www.theoceanproject.org).

Ocean's Day also kicks off the start of Rivers to Oceans week, which runs until June 14. It's a fusion of Canadian Rivers Day, celebrated since 2003, and Ocean's Day. This year, the focus is on Canada's North, largely because about 60 per cent of Canada's fresh water drains north, and the safety of that water supply is under strain due to increased development and shipping traffic, not to mention the threat posed by global climate change of a vast ice-melt.

This year, Rivers to Oceans week coincides with the Bicentennial reenactment of the historic journey of the voyageurs of the David Thompson Brigade. On www.2008thompsonbrigade.com, you can track the progress of the canoes, manned by 160 hardy souls who are paddling across four provinces on their 63-day journey, which will cover 3,600 kilometres and end on July 12.

Sandler-izing Middle East tensions

You Don't Mess With The Zohan

Stars Adam Sandler, John Turturro
Director Dennis Dugan
14A

By RICK McGINNIS
for Metro Vancouver

Adam Sandler plays a Mossad agent-turned-hairstylist in You Don't Mess With The Zohan, opening today.

REVIEW NO ONE is expecting a treatise on the crisis in the Middle East from Adam Sandler, but the comedian has assumed the role of lightning rod just by setting his film amidst the war that inevitably defeats anyone who says they can solve it.

Sandler plays the title role in the film, a sort of Israeli James Bond with a secret dream of styling hair in New York City, who fakes his death and goes off to live his blow-dried, '80s-inspired dream. Sandler plays Zohan with an Israeli accent so painstakingly bad that it becomes its own joke, as does the film's barrage of Hebrew and Arab slang, most of it invented.

Needless to say, most of these newly minted words are euphemisms for breasts, erections, or the sexual act; if Sandler does have any hidden political agenda, it just might be dragging a conflict that's frequently described as an obscenity down to the level of real smuttiness.

Rejected by Paul Mitchell's Manhattan salon, Zohan ends up in the boroughs, on a street where Jewish and Muslim businesses sit side by side, cutting hair in a struggling hair salon owned by a pretty Palestinian (Emmanuelle Chriqui), making his reputation by servicing his elderly female clients with the casual hedonism that's supposed to be a hallmark of Tel Aviv club culture.

His idyllic exile ends when he's recognized by an Arab cab driver (the inevitable Rob Schneider) who passes the news on to The Phantom (John Turturro), his Palestinian nemesis.

There's an evil real estate developer, a big showdown, and cameos from Mariah Carey, Chris Rock, John McEnroe and George Takei. At the end, Sandler imagines that we'd all get along a whole lot better by forgetting our differences and — at least for guys — concentrating on the things that unite us, like sports, consumer electronics, and earnest debates about who we'd rather tap — Hillary or Chelsea.

If only it were that simple.

Cinematography not enough

The Children Of Huang Shi

Stars Jonathan Rhys Meyers
Director Roger Spottiswoode
14A

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Vancouver

REVIEW CANADIAN-BORN director Roger Spottiswoode shifts gears from an exploration of retired Canadian General Romeo Dallaire's desperate efforts to save millions from slaughter during the Rwandan genocide in last year's Shake Hands With The Devil, to an equally harrowing tale of bravery in his latest The Children Of Huang Shi.

Unfortunately, both historically-based films are of similar, relatively poor quality.

The Children Of Huang Shi tells the story of English adventurer George Hogg (Jonathan Rhys Meyers) and his efforts to save a group of orphaned Chinese children from the advancing Japanese army in 1944 at the height of the Second Sino-Japanese War.

The Oxford-educated Hogg winds up caring for the boys after being saved by a communist freedom fighter (Chow Yun-Fat) and essentially deserted at their orphanage by Australian nurse Lee Pearson (Radha Mitchell).

He begins teaching the boys and eventually comes to the conclusion that a near-1,000 kilometre hike is the only way to save them from the Japanese or forced enlistment at the hands of Chinese nationalist forces.

Hogg eventually falls for the nurse and saves the kids before succumbing to a bout with tetanus.

That could be a spoiler for those unfamiliar with Hogg's story, but the real disappointment here is Spottiswoode's direction and remarkably lacklustre chemistry between Rhys Meyers and Mitchell.

While Rhys Meyers has promise as an actor and has delivered solid performances of late — he even made August Rush partially bearable, which was no simple task — the Irish actor delivers his lines in such a stunted, unbelievable fashion audiences might think they've stumbled into a community theatre play put to film.

Mitchell is just as bad and it's frankly difficult to tell whether it's the actors or Jane Hawksley and James MacManus' hokum-laden, abridged script that's the bigger problem.

Cinematographer Zhao Xiaoding displays rural China in vivid detail, but impressive landscape shots simply aren't enough to carry The Children Of Huang Shi.

Save your money and wait for the DVD.

Silent isn't always golden

Silent Light

Stars Cornelio Wall Fehr
Director Carlos Reygadas
PG

By STEVE GOW
for Metro Vancouver

Maria Pankratz stars in Silent Light.

REVIEW IT'S OVER 7 minutes into Silent Light before a single word is spoken. In fact, nearly 6 of those minutes are absorbed by a slow tracking shot of the sun rising on the stark New Mexico landscape.

Beautiful as it is, if you're in a rush to get to the action, you better not hold your breath.

Mexican filmmaker Carlos Reygadas (Japón) won the Jury Prize at Cannes last year with this aesthetic, contemplative drama about a Mennonite farmer struggling with forbidden love, although I'm not exactly sure it was warranted. With a running time of over 2 hours, this movie showcases family man Johan (Cornelio Wall Fehr) and his doomed affair with another woman (Maria Pankratz). While he has not kept it a secret from his devout wife (Miriam Toews), he must still decide what is right even as his faith (and his father) remind him extramarital romance is "the work of the enemy". While the moral struggle is fascinating enough, here it is only somewhat effective.

Surprisingly, it is not the use of non-professional actors that throw it off but the extremely sluggish pacing (did we really need to watch a 3 minute scene of cows being milked?) that ends up making Silent Light more laborious and pretentious than entertaining.

Kung Fu Panda cast kicks up real laughs

Kung Fu Panda

Stars Jack Black, Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie
Director Mark Osborne John Stevenson
G

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Vancouver

REVIEW BEFORE WE BEGIN, let's get the clichés out of the way — yes, everybody is Kung Fu Fighting in Kung Fu Panda and yes, a cover of Carl Douglas' one-hit wonder 1974 track of the same name features on the film's soundtrack.

But that's where the clichés end. Co-directors John Stevenson and Mark Osborne have carefully adhered to the conventions of the martial arts genre without exploiting them, opting instead to pay homage to the movies of their youth with the use of animation and Jack Black's very appropriate brand of humour.

Kung Fu Panda introduces us to Po (Be Kind Rewind's Black), a lazy panda who dreams of one day becoming a martial arts master, but is simply too fat and lazy to make it happen.

That is until he one day makes his way to a nearby temple to witness the crowning of the next 'chosen one' destined to hold the title of master, only to find himself tagged with the honour, much to the chagrin of the crusty guru Shifu (Stranger Than Fiction's Dustin Hoffman).

The future of China — which just happens to be populated by talking animals — rests in Po's paws as he begins training with Shifu's pupils: Master Monkey (Rush Hour 3's Jackie Chan), Master Tigress (Beowulf's Angelina Jolie), Master Viper (Watching The Detectives' Lucy Liu), Master Mantis (Superbad's Seth Rogen) and Master Crane (Arrested Development's David Cross).

Matters become more pressing when it's learned that the evil Tai Lung (Hot Rod's Ian McShane) has escaped from prison and is ready for a showdown with Shifu.

Shifu (voiced by Dustin Hoffman) kicks Jack Black's Po in Kung Fu Panda.

The comedy, if you hadn't guessed, is derived from an over-weight panda trying to master kung fu while trying to curb his voracious eating habits. For this, Black is the perfect choice to voice Po, a character built almost solely around the actor's manic delivery.

The rest of the casting is also spot-on — yes, even Dustin Hoffman as an aging warrior — while the fight scenes are spectacular. And although those scenes are full of laughs, they're also carefully designed to present kung fu in a realistic fashion utilizing genuine fighting styles and techniques.

As per Stevenson and Osborne's directions, the fights drive the story from start to finish without seeming gratuitous, while Yong Duk Jhun's cinematography and the film's fantastic animation bring China to life in a way we've never seen before.

More importantly, kids will love watching a dumb panda fumbling around as he tries to save his village from destruction at the hands of a sinister snow leopard. Kung Fu Panda is funny, full of action and just scary enough in a couple of scenes to keep both kids and adults at the edge of their seats — parents can't ask for much better.

Heavy-handedness kills Finn's Girl

Finn's Girl

Stars Brooke Johnson, Maya Ritter
Directors Dominique Cardona, Laurie Colbert
14A

By STEVE GOW
for Metro Vancouver

REVIEW THERE'S REALLY no subtle way to cinematically address the issue of abortion. In the case of Finn's Girl however, the provocative subject particularly sits like a pothole in the middle of Daytona Speedway.

Not that Finn's is a pro-life film, mind you.

There's surely no mistaking its point of view; a pair of hysterically-portrayed pro-life protesters make sure of that.

Hell, this melodrama even gives more credibility to a trio of pot-smoking prepubescent brats who spend their free time stealing skin mags from the local bookstore than it does the pro-lifers.

But maybe that's the point.

One of those brats happens to be Zelly (Maya Ritter). Coping with her lesbian mom's recent passing, she's now cared for by mom's widow Finn (Brooke Johnson) who proves a suitable replacement — when she's not shacking up with her abortion-clinic assistant or dodging gunshots by those pro-life zealots.

Obviously, this film aims to shed light on many heavy issues — abortion, parthenogenesis; even ecological concerns find a way into this movie.

But as much as Finn's Girl wants to sink its teeth into these many hot topics, a heavy-handed script and clunky performances leave it about as affecting as an after-school special.

Jack and the Kung Fu Panda

All thanks go to Black for getting movie made

By GLEN MILLER
for Metro Vancouver

FEATURE FEEL-GOOD STORY. Top-shelf animation. An all-star production team behind the scenes. And a struggle to get it made.

After four-plus years in production, the journey for Kung Fu Panda has ended with an uplifting family film that has a good shot of attaining the "classic" branding that will serve it well for years to come.

So it's a good thing that Jack Black finally gave his OK to accept the lead voiceover role of panda Po.

Otherwise producer Melissa Cobb would probably still be waiting to get the DreamWorks film completed. It opens in theatres today.

"He was the only person we could think of (for the Po role) but he said no a few times because he was busy or he wasn't in a place (mindset) where he wanted to do it," Cobb said at a press conference in Los Angeles.

Joining Black in the voiceover cast are two-time Academy-award winner Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie, Lucy Liu and Jackie Chan. Might be some box-office appeal there.

After a full-out, last-ditch sales pitch by co-director John Stevenson, who showed Black an animation of the Po character speaking dialogue from his role in the School of Rock to bait Black, the chase for the star finally became the catch. Once committed, as Black explains it, there was little preparation or research to do because he says the role is essentially him in his real life: a little chubby, in awe of his heroes growing up and always dreaming of bigger things.

The story begins with Po wanting to leave his father's noodle shop and somehow find a way to be a kung fu star, joining the ranks of his fighting heroes called the Furious Five.

From that group must come the new Dragon Warrior who must have the goods to fend off the most menacing warrior in the land, snow leopard Tai Lung.

With determination, Po gets himself on track to be his own hero.

In the beginning, Po doesn't figure that he has the body or the mind to get anywhere.

With the engaging tug of war with his mentor, Master Shifu (Hoffman), the student and master learn a few things about each other and themselves. Under the direction of Stevenson and co-director Mark Osborne, the production had the mandate of honoring the martial arts genre and the Chinese culture.

There's lots of humour, but parody got the boot. So did any pop culture references.

"We did tons and tons of research," said Osborne. "It was very important for us to honor the culture of kung fu."

Crew shapes Huang Shi

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Vancouver

FEATURE IT'S AMAZING the difference a determined film crew can make.

Canadian-born director Roger Spottiswoode learned exactly that on the set of his latest film The Children Of Huang Shi. Specifically, Spottiswoode (Shake Hands With The Devil) found that no challenge was insurmountable for his local crew as they attempted seemingly impossible shots throughout the film's shoot in rural China.

"The last shot in the film would have been made with a helicopter because you couldn't get a crane where we were," the director recalls. "You couldn't carry a one-ton crane up (a mountain). The Chinese crew carried a crane up there. There's no Western crew that would have done it, they would have laughed if you asked them to do it — no one would have had the nerve to ask them to do that. But 150 people carried this up a mountain without even thinking about it. Things happen in China in a different way."

CHRIS ATCHISON/METRO VANCOUVER
Director Roger Spottiswoode.

The Children Of Huang Shi tells the story of English adventurer George Hogg (August Rush's Jonathan Rhys Meyers), who arrived in China in 1937 to cover the Second Sino-Japanese War as a correspondent, but found himself teaching and caring for a group of orphaned boys.

Hogg's legacy is naturally close to the hearts of Chinese who have grown up with the tales of his leadership — literally under fire — from the surviving orphans who kept the story alive.

Beyond logistics, it was one of the reasons why Spottiswoode chose to use Chinese crews to shoot the film. But the 63-year-old director points out that not even gruelling shoots could prepare him for press days with Chinese media, who were unfamiliar with many of the historical points made in the film.

"We have references in the film to the fact that the nationalists were starving their own soldiers, we see some things about the past that don't make sense to them, that are well-known, but they're not aware of," Spottiswoode explains. "I had some criticism over how casting a capitalist (Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End's Chow Yun-Fat) playing a communist, which threw me ... In their eyes, Chow Yun-Fat is a wealthy Hong Kong actor who is now playing a middle-class Chinese communist officer. They didn't even know that those people existed because it's not (in their history books)."

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

★★★★ (out of 5)

Film fans will be hard-pressed not to smile when they hear John Williams' famed score and see that trademark fedora make its first big-screen appearance in 19 years, in a re-introduction to the greatest adventure character of all time. While the dialogue plods at times and a few scenes are more than a little far-fetched, The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull is pure summertime blockbuster joy.

IRON MAN

★★★★ (out of 5)

Robert Downey Jr. as Iron Man, a.k.a. arms dealer turned good guy Tony Stark, proves he's one of today's best character actors. With a great supporting cast (Jeff Bridges, Gwyneth Paltrow), thrilling action sequences and funny dialogue, Iron Man is a welcome return to the comic book movie genre.

SEX AND THE CITY

The feature adaptation of Sex And The City is among the year's most highly-anticipated films. The film catches up with Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Miranda (Cynthia Nixon), Samantha (Kim Cattrall) and Charlotte (Kristin Davis) four years after the TV series finale. Problems arise — someone has an affair, someone gets jilted, and communication issues threaten to tear up the foursome. It can all be sorted out with endless conversation and shopping.

METRO NEWS SERVICES

Liv Tyler (Lord of the Rings) and Scott Speedman (Weirdsville) are harassed by a group of mask-wearing oddballs in the middle of the night. Although the plot doesn't sound too shockingly original, what first-time writer/director Bryan Bertino accomplishes is an incredibly calculated, intense suspense picture wrought with themes of fate and circumstance.

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN

Oscar-nominated director Andrew Adamson (Shrek, Shrek 2) does a fine job bringing the second instalment of the Narnia Chronicles to life with a blend of old-fashioned sword fights and dazzling special effects. This is another well-casted, well-written entry in the series.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS

Jack (Ashton Kutcher) and Joy (Cameron Diaz) get hitched one boozy Vegas night. The morning-after annulment is cancelled when he hits a $3-million jackpot with her quarter. Now they're stuck with each other for the sake of the dough. A promising start can't save this ordinary, slightly offensive film.

Mad Men to make leap forward?

IDIOT BOX

RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

TRULY MADLY: The first season of Mad Men — AMC's surprise hit — is getting a replay on CTV here starting this Sunday, in anticipation of season two's debut on the A Channel in the fall, and the DVD box set of season one is due out next month, which would probably explain why you can't throw an empty Johnny Walker Black bottle around here without hitting an ad or cover story about the show.

Flawed and inconsistent, even unbelievable, Mad Men has a pointedly selective take on the period when it's set — the button-down, pre-Beatles early '60s, with its booze-swilling, philandering adults, cigarette-smoking pregnant moms and silent, seething youth. I love the show, flaws and all, which is why I can't help but be intrigued by the season two rumours escaping from the set around now.

Late last week, USA Today ran a piece in which creator Matthew Weiner said that the second season will take place after what seems to be a popular trend in TV dramas — a leap forward in time. Shows such as Lost, Battlestar Galactica and Desperate Housewives have all hit the fast-forward button to spin their wheels and accelerate forward out of sticky dramatic spots, but Weiner says that Mad Men's leapfrog won't be a big one:

"The world has changed a little bit, but the stories will involve two things: One is that you have to live with the consequences of your actions, and (the other is) people don't change," he says. Viewers "will be seeing their old friends, but they will have new problems."

All the main players from season one are in place when season two begins, but Weiner says that "you will know that something different has happened." With the Bay of Pigs and the Cuban Missile Crisis to help colour the background — I can't wait to see how Weiner handles Kennedy's assassination — Mad Men has a lot to play with before the first kid comes home from college with long hair and a copy of Rubber Soul and a few of the younger guys at Sterling Cooper get together to smoke some tea instead of swilling scotch to try and get a feel for the youth market.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Grammer home after heart attack

Actor released from hospital

Grammer

FORMER Cheers and Frasier star Kelsey Grammer was released from a hospital in Hawaii Wednesday, four days after suffering what was described as a mild heart attack, People magazine reported.

Grammer, 53, is "resting comfortably" at his home on Hawaii's Big Island, People quoted the actor's spokesman as saying.

He had chest pains Saturday while paddle-boarding with his wife, Camille, and was taken to a hospital, where he was found to have suffered a heart attack.

Grammer was stricken a few weeks after the Fox network canceled his new show, Back to You, in which he starred as a pompous, womanizing TV news anchor. The series made it for only one season.

Grammer gained fame portraying the sherry-swilling shrink Dr. Frasier Crane for 20 years, initially as a co-star on the NBC comedy hit Cheers and then as the star of his own spinoff series. REUTERS

Cattrall to be a toon

SEX AND THE CITY co-star Kim Cattrall has joined the voice cast of the Canadian cartoon satire Producing Parker, which will premiere on Canada's E! network next year.

Cattrall will play the self-absorbed, high-maintenance host of "The Dee Show," a daytime talk show that sells viewers on the myth of having it all. E! has ordered 13 half-hours of the animated comedy, which sends up the daytime talk show genre. REUTERS

I grew up viewing chicken feet as a delicacy. Boiled for stock, then fried and salted, it was my mother's way of rewarding me. When my friend Stephanie (a local authority on Chinese cuisine) mentioned she knew a place with the best chicken feet in town (not to mention dim sum), I finagled a ride-along. Shun Feng is similar to many high-end Chinese restaurants, a wide-open space decorated with heavy linen, round tables and gleaming wood. The food is what sets it apart. Their dim sum lunch is highly affordable ($3.25-$6.50 per dish) and varied. Along with all the usual suspects (shrimp dumpling, pork dumpling, etc.) they offer seasonal specialities, like last week's pan-fried B.C. spot prawns with sweet soy sauce ($19.95) a dinner plate full of whole, succulent shrimp, with heads attached (it's the tastiest part). The aforementioned chicken feet ($3.75) were deep-fried, then steamed plump and served in bean and oyster sauce. Daikon cassolette ($3.75) and rice roll with sliced geoduck and asparagus ($6.50) were also winners. A French-style foie gras pastry with pineapple ($5.60) was a sweet surprise, as were the tender baked almond buns ($3.75). It's all definitely worth multiple trips across the bridge.

Please sir, may I have some more?

So just in case the name doesn't tip you off, Oliver Twist Estate Winery in (you guessed it) Oliver, B.C. has a "twist caps only" policy. Despite the tongue-in-cheek nomenclature, these are serious wines, including a pretty heady 2007 Pinot Gris, a spicy floral with hints of strawberry. Buy it direct from the winery ($18.00) or just go for a drink at The Smoking Dog (where I sampled it) or Raincity Grill.

School Crush

Penélope Cruz dazzles as the temptress who seduces her older professor in Elegy.

By Denis Seguin
Contributing Writer

Penélope Cruz casually enters the room, thumb-scrolling on her BlackBerry. Next, she pulls out a Marlboro and asks "¿Alguien tiene fuego?" which is a sexy way of saying "Anyone got a light?" The good news? It seems that she's a regular human being, vices and all.

Now for the bad news: Cruz doesn't dish — even if the question posed is purely hypothetical. Like whether she could ever imagine having a love affair with a man more than 40 years her senior — a fair question, seeing as it lies at the heart of her new movie, Elegy.

Based on the Philip Roth novel The Dying Animal and brilliantly adapted and directed by Isabel Coixet, the film stars Ben Kingsley as a Manhattan sophisticate who falls in love with one of his students. Cruz plays Consuela, a mature student who becomes the object of his desire and then the eye of his hurricane.

"I think Philip Roth is a genius," says Cruz. "He makes you understand all the characters — even the ones you don't like and the ones that make the biggest mistakes. You understand them — you understand their fears. He's a very honest writer. I believed the story, and I connected with it."

FACE VALUE

Her enviable figure may have earned her the nickname "The Body," but now that Elle Macpherson is Revlon's newest global ambassador, her face is taking centre stage. The 45-year-old kicks off her role this fall in advertisements for the company's latest cosmetics campaign. (Gucci Westman, Revlon's new artistic director, will do her makeup.) But off-camera, her beauty regimen is decidedly low-key. "I believe that beauty comes from the inside," says the mother of two. "I spend more time having a good laugh with my kids than I do looking in the mirror."

The Henry Ford of fashion

Laurent leaves behind a legacy of bold designs

THIS WEEK fashionable women around the world are checking themselves in the mirror before they dash off to work. As they grab their purses and the keys to the car, they're looking back at their reflection — and winking. It's a respectful clin d'oeil to the passing of Yves Saint Laurent, the 71-year-old designer, who died Sunday of brain cancer. His funeral was yesterday.

As a pioneer of modern ready-to-wear, Saint Laurent made the lustre of high fashion accessible to all women. He did for fashion what Henry Ford did for the car.

Saint Laurent put women in trousers and tuxedos, pant suits with chic bow-front blouses. He left behind a profound legacy — the working woman's wardrobe.

Anne Tillman-Graham, general manager of YSL Beauté in Canada, recalls attending one YSL fashion show in the early '90s. She had just started with the company and was thrilled to attend a runway presentation.

She remembers the launch of the "Y" fragrance in 1964 and Pour Homme in 1971 in which Saint Laurent posed nude for the advertising campaign and then for Opium in 1977.

Wool trouser suit with crepe blouse, 1966, embodied the power Saint Laurent designed for modern women.

"There was always controversy but in a fun way," says Tillman-Graham, 52. "With Opium he was criticized for glamorizing the drug. But Saint Laurent was really just focusing on the exotic-ness."

Fifty-something Catherine Nugent was always intrigued by the contradiction — how such a shy man could create such dramatic, bold fashion.

"His collections always had a spectacular theme. It was over the top but wearable. You couldn't be shy to wear his clothing. The jewels were big and brilliant. Capes had huge, dramatic collars. It was drop dead clothing. I had three peasant skirts in silk moiré. I still have a tuxedo and an embroidered Russian-theme velvet suit."

The ongoing saga of the bob

CATE BLANCHETT'S blunt cut in Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull is a sleek cap of menace.

The dark coif of the evil meanie in the latest Indiana Jones series is just the most recent twist in the saga of the bob, the hairdo that has been around for decades but keeps evolving. Flapper, dominatrix, flirt, it can do them all.

Right now, the most popular version is the "Pob," in honour of Victoria Beckham (aka Posh Spice), who cut her hair in a bob last year. She began anew a craze that's been adopted by celebrities such as actress Katie Holmes, and regular women around the world.

It's not the first look to have launched a thousand shears. In the 1970s we wanted to be an Angel, then in the '90s a Friend.

Like Farrah Fawcett's tawny mane from her Charlie's Angels days, and Jennifer Anniston's face-framing layered cut from Friends, Posh's bob has become the must have 'do for the fashion-conscious crowd.

» The bob has been around forever. Some sources credit the ancient Egyptians, others say it was the brainchild of stylist Antoine in 1909 Paris, and still others pin it on the flappers of the '20s.

Jessica's dad behind split: Report

Singer Jessica Simpson's father Joe has brought her relationship with football player Tony Romo to the brink and was the main source behind their split in May, usmagazine.com reports.

A source told Us Joe asked Romo, 28, to drop his agent so he could take over his NFL career and $67.5-million US contract.

He even offered to broker a deal to sell his engagement and wedding to a magazine should Romo and Jessica, 27, get engaged.

"'If you guys have a marriage, I can do the same (sell it) that I did with Ashlee,'" a source quoted Joe as saying.

As tension grew, the Dallas Cowboys quarterback reportedly gave Jessica an ultimatum: Tell dad to back off.

When asked for comment by Us, Joe defended himself, telling Us, "It's unfair to criticize me for what every manager does for his or her clients."

Charlize talks marriage

Charlize Theron has never yearned to get married, and insists she has no plans to tie the knot with boyfriend of seven years Stuart Townsend, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The couple has been subject to numerous marriage rumours throughout their long romance, but maintain they are as close and committed as any married couple, and have no plans to change their situation.

The actress tells the July issue of Glamour magazine, "Even when I was a little girl I never dreamed of the white dress and all of that. I want to be clear: I am not judgmental about marriage. I am judgmental about how our government doesn't want to see the reality of gay and lesbian marriages."

Married or not, Theron insists maintaining a long relationship requires effort. The Oscar winner adds, "I think if you are in a one or two-year relationship, love is enough. You can thrive on that. When you hit years three and four, you realize that if you're going to live with somebody ... you have to be nurtured emotionally and spiritually, and you have to be intrigued.

Because if that intrigue runs out, you're not going to want to go home anymore."

Jim credits boy with love lesson

Actor Jim Carrey credits the autistic son of his girlfriend Jenny McCarthy with teaching him how to love, imdb.com reports.

Carrey spoke out during a march in Washington D.C. on Wednesday, to raise awareness of the presence of toxins in vaccines, which McCarthy claims was the cause of five-year-old son Evan's condition.

Carrey, also accompanied by his 20-year-old daughter, Jane, said, "He taught me how to love. And without Evan I might never have seen the greatness of Jenny's spirit. (Jenny is) the source of all that is good (in my life)."

Liv may want hubby back

Five weeks after announcing her separation from rocker Royston Langdon, actress Liv Tyler is having second thoughts, starmagazine.com reports.

Tyler "is desperately sad and thinks she may have made the mistake of a lifetime," says a source. "She now feels that no matter how bad it was, they can still make it work."

After hearing from pals like actress Gwyneth Paltrow that marriage requires hard work, Liv, 30, has tried to reach out to the Langdon, 36, to see if they can patch things up. So far, no luck.

The couple, who wed in 2003, have a son, Milo, 3.
